Judy Gerrard is a leader with hands on experience in developing staff and mentoring programs. Having started her career as an eligibility worker, she has spent the last 25 years in employee training and organization development, serving the Oregon Department of Human Services. Judy is known for her dynamic, interactive presentations as we will see in her opening keynote: “Inspire and Grow Through Mentoring.” Mentoring raises the bar on performance and contributes to being an effective organization. Judy will share from her experiences, lessons learned and best practices. Mentoring can be through a formal program, or informally arranged. There will be testimonials for mentoring that will inspire you to create your own programs or learning partnerships. Participants will get ideas, tips, techniques for and be able to engage and develop effective mentoring partnerships. They will also come away with resources for developing a mentoring culture in their organizations.

Scott Friedman is a motivational humorist who gets audience members laughing while opening their minds to new ideas. Scott knows how to connect with audiences worldwide. He appropriately crafts his message to bring relevant value to his audiences. He brings a fresh global perspective to his programs about change management. His improvisational skills, customized humor, and delightful nature add a refreshing quality to each program. In his closing keynote, “The Best Way to Predict the Future is to Create it” Scott explains that in these turbulent, globally competitive times, innovation and resourcefulness are essential to survival. This renowned program is fast-paced, humorous, and full of useable ideas on becoming a victor of change instead of a victim. Create a greater self-awareness as you learn to be driven by your values and purpose, rather than circumstances and emotions. “The Best Way” speech, leaves participants feeling better about themselves, their responsibilities, and their roles for the future.
