ALA 2016 Annual Conference and Exhibition

Conversations, engagement, and learning that spark innovations transforming our libraries start and continue at ALA conferences. With a focus on the strength and future of libraries, the Annual Conference and Exhibition is known as the global library event of the year because it offers unparalleled collaboration and connections while meeting the widest range of professional development needs.

Confirmed speakers (more to be announced in the coming weeks):

Diane Guerrero will be the featured speaker on the 2016 President's Program. The well-known actress is also a high-profile advocate for immigration reform, and ALA President Sari Feldman looks forward to welcoming her, saying, "Her personal story is a powerful reminder of the library's essential role in creating individual opportunity and community progress."

Auditorium Speaker Maya Penn, a teenager whose TEDWomen Talk has had more than a million views, is an award-winning philanthropist, environmental activist, entrepreneur, filmmaker, eco-designer, keynote speaker, artist, animator, coder, illustrator, and writer.

You can also look forward to the new walkable conference campus, the plentiful restaurants in the adjacent Pointe Orlando, and easy getting around with clean, regulated taxis.

Check back as we continue to confirm more exciting details!
