Project Schedule

The project timeline spans six months (26 weeks), structured to ensure thorough review and stakeholder engagement while maintaining steady progress toward deliverables. Our phased approach allows for natural overlap between activities, ensuring efficient use of resources and continuous momentum throughout the project lifecycle.

Phase 1's extended duration (12 weeks) provides the foundational understanding necessary for subsequent phases, while its overlap with Phase 2 allows for the immediate translation of departmental findings into actionable recommendations. Similarly, Phase 3's policy revision work begins before Phase 2 concludes, enabling the incorporation of stakeholder feedback and ensuring that policy development remains responsive to ongoing discoveries and departmental input.

The graphic below shows our deliberate overlap in project phases which reflects the iterative and interconnected nature of policy review and development in complex governmental organizations.

Phase 1: Current State Analysis and Departmental Policy Review

(Weeks 1-12)

We'll conduct a comprehensive review of HR policies across Fort Bend County, including both central HR policies and department-specific variations. This phase will combine examining existing documentation and evaluating compliance requirements, with an all-encompassing and extensive departmental outreach.

Our comprehensive review begins with a systematic examination of Fort Bend County's HR policy landscape across all departments. Understanding that departmental practices may have evolved differently over time to meet specific operational needs, we will conduct an extensive outreach program to capture the full spectrum of HR policy implementation throughout the County. This approach recognizes that while the County maintains central HR policies, departments may have developed supplementary policies or interpretations that need to be understood, evaluated, and either standardized or justified as necessary variations.

- Our team will engage directly with department leaders and their designated department coordinator through structured interviews and documentation reviews. This collaborative approach ensures we capture not just the written policies, but also the practical implementation and historical context of why certain departmental variations may exist. By understanding these nuances, we can better recommend which policies should be standardized across the County and where legitimate operational needs might require controlled policy variations.
- The departmental outreach phase will also serve as a crucial opportunity to build stakeholder buy-in for any forthcoming policy changes. By involving departments early in the review process, we create channels for feedback and ensure that final policy recommendations will be both practical and implementable across the diverse operations of Fort Bend County.

Throughout this phase, we'll identify key risks that affect HR policies and planning, including:

- Outdated policies resulting in inefficiencies and increased burden on personnel
- Inadequate compliance with all applicable laws and regulations
- Policy gaps and/or contradictions
- Employee resistance to change

- County's Policy Variation Analysis Gap Report

Phase 2: Recommendations Report

(Weeks 13-16)

We recognize that successful policy implementation requires both technical accuracy and practical applicability across diverse department functions. This phase focuses on synthesizing our findings into actionable recommendations that balance the need for standardization with operational flexibility where justified.

Each of the recommendations will be structured to facilitate County-internal discussions and clear decision-making by commissioners court, with explicit consideration of implementation impacts, resource requirements, and change management needs. This approach ensures policy decisions can be made with full understanding of their practical implications across all County departments prior to approval and acceptance by the court.

Phase 3: Policy and Handbook Revisions

(Weeks 17-26)

The culmination of our policy review and revision process centers on a collaborative partnership with Fort Bend County's HR and Legal leadership to ensure all handbook revisions meet both operational needs and legal requirements. This iterative review process recognizes the complex interplay between HR best practices, legal compliance, and practical implementation within the County's unique operating environment.

- The final phase focuses on transforming approved recommendations into clearly written, legally sound policy documents that will serve as the foundation for consistent HR practices across Fort Bend County. This process involves careful drafting of policy language that is both technically precise and practically understandable by all County employees. Our team will work closely with the County's legal counsel to ensure all policy revisions meet legal requirements while maintaining clarity and usability.
- Understanding the critical nature of policy implementation, we will develop comprehensive rollout plans that include communication strategies, training frameworks, and monitoring mechanisms. This approach ensures new policies are not only well-written but effectively implemented across all departments. Special attention will be paid to departments that previously maintained variant policies, ensuring smooth transition to standardized approaches while addressing any operational concerns.
- Our team will facilitate structured review sessions that bring together key stakeholders from HR, Legal, and department leadership to examine and refine policy language, ensuring clarity, enforceability, and operational feasibility. The review process incorporates multiple checkpoints with commissioners court, allowing for their strategic input before final approval. We understand that the employee handbook serves as a cornerstone document that must align with the court's vision for County operations while maintaining legal compliance and operational effectiveness. Through these carefully structured working sessions with HR and Legal teams, we will refine policy language to ensure it effectively communicates expectations to employees while providing necessary protections for the County.

The final handbook approval process includes a comprehensive presentation to Commissioners Court that demonstrates how the revised policies address previously identified gaps, incorporate stakeholder feedback, and align with both legal requirements and County objectives. This collaborative approach ensures the final document reflects a unified vision for County HR policies while maintaining necessary legal and operational standards.
